WARREN M.CROSBY & CO WARREN M.CROSBY & C.

Last Sunday at Vinewood.

[Written for the State Journal.] Sunday evening, just at sunset, Came a brave youth to our dwelling: Came he with an invitation Which included all the maidens. And the spoken invitation, Falling from his lips in kindness, Met with sure and certain answer.

Thusly was the question worded— Thusly also was it answered: "Will you go with me to Vinewood? Will you be my huckleberry?" And in concert came the answer: "Yes, we'll go with you to Vinewood; We will be your huckleberries."

So we started for the street car; Walted, waited at the corner. Then we started out to walk it—Walked we to the transfer station. There we took a car for Vinewood and we stood and held on tightly—Firmly, to what e'er was next us. And we watched the sunset fading. While the crescent moon grew bri and the twinking stars, appearing Filled with glory all the heavens.

When we reached our destination, Which was not till eight and after. We were wearled with the jelting. But the music calmed our spirits, Filied us with a glad rejoicing. So we wandered mid the grasses Where the chiggers lived and flourished, And we added entertainment To their lives within the wildwood.

When the lights had grown and lessened And the darkness pressed us onward. Then we hied us to the station. Heping there to find a street car Which would take us out from Vinewood, Bear us quickly to the city. But stas! We waited vainly, Vainly waited on the platform Till the chickens crowed and cackled, And the morn was fast approaching.

(12:30 A. M.)
But our trouble was not over.
For the car ahead had trailers
Which did leave the track at crossings,
Left at grades and cuts between them.
It was just outside the city
That the worst was to befall us,
For an axle broke in pieces;
Broke, and stalled all cars behind it.

(2:39 A. M.)
We reach our house on Monday morning, Found our ma and pa were scorning Peaceful sleep and dreams delightful. Were they frightened? Never think it. For the telephone had told them. Had informed them of the axle. Of the axle, which was broken.

Workmen starting for their duties in the sunrise Monday morning. Told of sad but wiser people. They had met, then just returning From the concert out at Vinewood, From the Sunday evening concert.

Claimed That a Good Sour Mash Bourbon Can Be Made.

Upper Sandusky, O., July 31.—Robert O'Brien, an experienced bacteriologist, was in the city today and to a correspondent said: in the city today and to a correspondent said:

"I have been in Milwaukee assisting Prof. Luchia of Germany in some very interesting experiments. The object was to make whisky out of sorghum molasses, and Prof. Luchea was brought from Europe for the purpose.

"The chief ambition was to produce a rye, but this was not accomplished. We did succeed, however, in producing a splendid sourmash—an imitation that can not be fold from the genuine—at a cost of about 5 cents a gallon.

"I believe it will revolutionize the whisky trade so far as sourmash bourbon is concerned, for the people will not hesitate to buy something that can be so perfectly and chesply made."

WOULD REBUILD IT. People Are Getting Anxious About

Grantville Bridge.

The people of Cakland and that vicinity are anxious to have the Grantville bridge rebuilt at once.

Scott Kelsey appeared before the county commissioners this morning to request that the bridge be rebuilt at once. The spans were badly wrecked by the flood, and the commissioners fear that the wrecked spans of many of the Kansas river bridges will be found useless. They may be given to junk men who will agree to remove them from the river. Bids will be received next week for the recovery of the spans that were washed away.

After several weeks of absolute silence since her last gurgle without even so much as a ripple to show where she sank into oblivion, Mrs. Nation is heard sank into oblivion, Mrs. Nation is neard from at Pittsburg, Pa., from where she wrote to a Topeka friend this week. She says she is very busy and will not return to Topeka before winter. She is still lecturing and collecting money for her home for drunkards' wives and has not been in Topeka since immediately after the flood.

Rain Did Not Miss Any Shawnee Corn.

The rain Thursday afternoon extended well over Shawnee county.

The farmers say that the corn was in great need of moisture, and that the two hours' rain was sufficient, with the cool weather today, to keep the corn from suffering for a few days. Alfalfa and prairie hay are in good condition, and alfalfa especially is growing well.
